WASHINGTON (R) - The United States said Monday that if Moscow was genuinely seeking a political settlement in Afghanistan, it would complete its troop withdrawal and end attacks on U.S.-backed rebels. State Department spokesman Charles Redman, reacting to remarks by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, said: "If the Soviets are sincere in their interest in a political settlement they should understand that a complete withdrawal from Afghanistan is essential to this process." He also told a news briefing that "the continued use of firepower and threats of suspending their withdrawal will do nothing to encourage a political solution." Moscow recently suspended its withdrawal of Soviet troops, which had been supporting the Kabul government since late 1979, after complaining that the United States and Pakistan were continuing to send weapons to U.S.-financed rebels. Gorbachev, at the end of a three-day visit to India Sunday, urged U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to move quickly to try to win agreement on a coalition government to rule Afghanistan.

AROUND THE WORLD...

Turkey, Iraq and Syria discuss water

ANKARA (AP) - Officials from Turkey, Syria and Iraq Monday discussed how to share the waters of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers. Syria and Iraq are concerned over insufficient water flow from the two rivers, which both originate in Turkey. Turkish Public Works Minister Safa Giray, who heads the two-day meeting, told an opening address that Turkey would be considerate about the water needs of its eighbours. Iraqi Agriculture and Irrigation Minister Karim Hassan Ribda and his Syrian counterpart Abdul Rahman Al Medeni are attending the meeting here. Syria and Iraq have expressed concern that Turkey could cut off or reduce the flow of the waters, a vital resource in the arid region.

PLO denounces kidnapping

SIDON (AP) -- The Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) Monday denounced the kidnapping of a Swiss delegate of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Sidon last week, saying it was aimed at discrediting the newly proclaimed independent state of Palestine. The PLO statement, issued in Lebanon's largest Palestinian refugee camp of 'Ain Al Hilweh on Sidon's southern outskirts, was signed by a number of PLO factions. Red Cross delegate Peter Winkler, 32, was abducted in Sidon Thursday and a similar denunciation was issued then. No group has claimed responsibility for the abduction. The ICRC also issued a statement in Beirut Monday calling for Winkler's

30 killed in downed plane, Kabul says

ISLAMABAD (R) - Thirty people were killed in an Afghan transport plane shot down by Pakistan Saturday, official Kabul Radio said Monday. It said the pilot had lost his way because of a technical fault during a flight from the capital Kabul to Jalalabad in the east and sought help from the nearest airport in Pakistan. "Not only no help was provided, the plane was shot down by the Pakistan air force," according to the broadcast, monitored in Islamabad. The Pakistan Defence Ministry said Sunday that an intruding Afghan plane was shot down by ground fire near the northwestern town of Parachinar and everybody on board was killed.

Explosion at Great Wall kills 2

PEKING (R) — An explosion of China's ancient Great Wall near Peking killed two Chinese and injured several Western tourists Monday, diplomatic sources said. The two Chinese were blown to pieces in the blast, which occurred around midday. A group of 24 foreign tourists walking along the Great Wall were caught in the explosion. A New Zealand woman received serious head injuries and in for a was later operated on in a Peking hospital. Several other tourists were hile the slightly injured. Western diplomats said.

itting E Locusts sighted in North Yemen

SANAA (AP) — Locusts swarming across the Arabian Peninsula invaded North Yemen earlier this month, the Agriculture Ministry announced Monday. The announcement said that 10 swarms had arrived since Nov. I, with one Nov. 10 covering an area 40 kilometres length and three kilometres wide. It said the locusts were being monitored and combatted in line with precautions already taken.

Iran wants Saudis to take first step

NICOSIA (AP) - Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister Ali Mohammad Besharati said Monday that Sandi Arabia should make the first move towards restoring bilateral ties, the Islamic Republic News Agency (IRNA) reported. The agency quoted Besharati as saying Saudi Arabia should "take the first step in the way of a smooth flow of reciprocal relations," in an interview with the English-language daily Tehran Times. Saudi Arabia broke ties with the Tehran last April, accusing Iran of terrorism and subversion. On his tour of Arab Gulf states earlier this month, Besharati said in Kuwait that Iran was ready for direct talks aimed at normalising relations. He repeated the same message Saturday in an interview with Tehran Radio. But in the newspaper interview, Besharati called for more action from the Saudis, according to IRNA.

israelis not to renew doctor's contract

TEL AVIV (AP) - An Israeli hospital is refusing to renew the contract of an Arab physician following a controversy over the doctor's willingness to treat a soldier wounded in the occupied territories. However, a spokeswoman for Soroka hospital in Beersheba said Monday there was no connection between the decision not to renew Dr. Daoud Samuel's contract and the controversy. Dr. Samuel would stop working at the hospital in mid-December, said spokeswoman Tami Lunenfeld. The Hebrew-language daily Hadashot said the surgeon several weeks ago refused to treat a soldier who was wounded when a Palestinian hurled a rock on him in the Gaza Strip.

Canadian voter turnout heavy

OTTAWA (R) - Canadians voted Monday as officials predicted a record turnout following a bitter and volatile federal election campaign that focused on a U.S.-Canada free trade agreement. The campaign ended Sunday night with Prime Minister Brian Mulronev predicting victory and opposition leader John Turner pleading for help to defeat the free trade accord negotiated by Mulroney. "If people continue to work hard, we have a good chance of forming a majority government," Mulroney said in Quebec. Turner told a rally in Vancouver: "Help me do it (defeat the trade pact). I can do it from Vancouver, but give me these members of partiament Monday night."

Defence seeking Hamadi's acquittal

FRANKFURT (R) - Lawyers for Lebanese hijacker Mohammad Ali Hamadi indicated Monday they would seek his acquittal on grounds of insanity, saying he was shell-shocked after years of guerrilla battles in Lebanon. Hamadi is on trial on charges of murder and air piracy in the 1985 hijacking of a U.S. airliner in which a passenger was shot dead. He has admitted air piracy but denied any part in the murder, blaming a second hijacker who remains at large. Hamadi's defenders filed a motion in a Frankfurt court Monday demanding medical expertise on emotional and physical injuries which they said had damaged his capacity to distinguish right from wrong.

Israeli soldier kills officer, self

TEL AVIV (AP) - An Israeli soldier shot and killed another member of the army, then turned the submachine gun on himself and committed suicide, military sources said. The soldier, who was apparently upset because a disciplinary court sentenced him to military prison, burst into an office at a base in southern Israel early Monday and opened fire, the sources said.

Gulf PoW exchange to start Thursday

NICOSIA (AP) - Repatriation of more than 1,500 sick or wounded prisoners or war (PoWs) between Iran and Iraq will begin Thursday, Tehran Radio reported Monday. The first stage of the exchange of 411 Iranian and 1,158 Iraqi PoWs will be completed by the end of next week, the radio said. The radio said that the timetable for the exchange had been agreed to in a Nov. 19 meeting in Geneva.

Yair Sprintzak, 77, of the rightwing Moledet party administered the oaths under a law that makes the oldest member of the Knesset, or parliament, its acting speaker until a permanent speaker is chosen.

Moledet, which won two seats in the Nov. 1 election, calls for the "voluntary transfer" of Palestinians from the occupied territories.

Before swearing in the new legislators, Sprintzak delivered a highly political speech in which he called for a "greater Israel," a concept under which the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip would become part of Israel. More than a dozen left-wing legislators, shouting words of Radio, Hussein said the killing took place on the night of Oct. 18 when Gegeo, a trusted bodyguard, was shooting his gun in a private villa near the presidential palace.

The president said Odai sent his own bodyguard, Salam Haza'a, to ask Gegeo to stop shooting, but Gegeo did not obey. Odai and his bodyguard went to investigate why Gegeo did not prohibits shooting from personal weapons during celebrations.

The Iraqi leader said in his letter that Odai went to Gegeo and asked him if he received his order to stop shooting and when the bodyguard said yes, Odai hit him with a wooden bat. Gegeo was rushed to a hospital where he died the next day from a head wound, Odai, 25, is the oldest of the president's five children.

In Nicosia, Cyprus, informed sources said that the bodyguard was particularly close to the president. They said that a distraught President Hussein accompanied Gegeo's body to a church for funeral preparations. The bodyguard, believed to be in his twenties, was the son of the president's male cook and the governess that raised his three laughters, the sources said.

Odai resigned as head of Iraq's Olympic Committee after the incident, but retained his position as the head of the board of Saddam University, established earlier this year. Hussein said be personally investigated the killing and decided to refer the case to the judicial authority, "so that justice is done."

The Iraqi leader disclosed that Odai tried to commit suicide when he heard that Gegeo died and was himself hospitalised before being iailed three days later. Hussein said Odai tried to commit suicide two times again when he was in prison but his life was again saved by doctors. The president described his bodyguard Gegeo as a trusted person in his service and "a man who never disobeyed him."

Hussein told the justice minister that his son has not committed any such crime before, describing the killing as "a will of God which cannot be perseverance." He said that the crime might be "a test for our patience and perseverance.' "It is my constitutional responsibility to enforce justice in the society... and that does not exempt anyone," Hussein said in his letter to the minister.

Long chapter of rebellion comes to a close in Chad

Hissene Habre

By Abakar Assidikh Reuter

N'DJAMENA - President Hissene Habre has closed the chapter on Chad's 23 years of civil war by persuading one of his last and fiercest enemies to return from exile. Acheikh Ibn Omar was given a warm welcome in N'djamena by Foreign Minister Gouara Lassou Sunday. A day earlier he signed a ceasefire in Baghdad.

The rebel leader said on his arrival the two sides were determined to turn a page in history. "It is quite natural that we should be able to return some day to our country after so many divisions," he added.

Chad, which stretches from the centre of the Sahara Desert to the heart of equatorial Africa, became independent from France in 1960 and has been riven since 1965 by a tangle of armed conflicts.

It began as a fight between the Arab north and the black South but centred in recent years on rivalries among northern leaders including Habre, former President Goukouni Oueddei and Acheikh.

Libyan leader Muammar Qadhafi backed first one then another of the Chadian rivals while laying claim to a strip of territory on the northern border where the last major fighting took place a year ago. France became deeply involved with its troops defending Habre's hold on the capital after he fell out with Libya and emerged as a pro-Western fi-

After restoring diplomatic relations with Libya last month, Habre now looks set to consolidate domestic peace with assistance from those who once plotted his downfall. Acheikh is the latest of scores of former foes of Habre who rallied behind him in a process hastened by a string of military victories against Libya in northern Chad last year.

"Acheikh's return is a decisive step in the reconciliation process... Habre has shown his one government strength, source said.

The Baghdad agreement allowed for an exchange of prisoners and appeared to guarantee a position in the Chadian government for Acheikh alongside other former rebels.

Bahrain retracing steps to ancient pearl industry

By Charles P. Wallace

MANAMA - Hassan Arrayed opened a ragged square of red felt on the desk in front of him and lowered his face like a falcon swooping in on its prey.

With a cackle from his gappedtooth grin. Arrayed held his prize out to a woman customer who was enveloped in gauzy black silks down to her tattooed hands. 'This one is $60,000," he said proudly. Clutched in Arraved's hand was a lustrous pearl the colour of Devonshire cream. The pearl, which caught the sunlight flooding in from the streets of Bahrain's gold market outside the tiny stall, was the size of a grape.

Long before anyone knew the value of petroleum under the Arabian sands, pearls were the measure of wealth in the small emirates like Bahrain that line the western shores of the Gulf. Pearls from the oyster beds in the Gulf were considered the finest in the world, treasured from the royal houses of Europe to the exotic bazaars of India.

The Gulf's pearl industry. , which prospered for thousands of vears, collapsed in the 1930s, the victim of the worldwide depression, the discovery of oil and Japan's perfection of the cultivated pearl. Now, the pearl industry is little more than a pleasant but distant memory, an anachronism limited to a handful of pearl merchants and a few " hearty divers who try to turn a a profit from a hobby.

But now Bahrain's petroleum is running out. At current levels of production, the oil will be completely exhausted in 1996. The tiny island is seeking ways to diversify its economy and is once again turning to the pearl.

In 1985, the government set aside $54,000 in an attempt to , revive the pearl industry, which had flourished since the dawn of time from Oman in the south to Kuwait in the northern Gulf. Bahrain was always the heart of the business.

The Bahrain Centre for Studies and Research bought a research ship, the Pearl of Bahram, and - trained 10 scuba divers in an effort to survey the old oyster beds. The testing is still going on. "There's been no pearl diving since the 1950s," said Sami Dannish, the head of the centre. "But the idea that for 30 years the pearl beds had't been fished and were loaded with pearls turned out to be fallacy. We're still trying to determine if the project is feasible.

Such remarks seem a far cry from the heyday of the pearl industry at the turn of the century. Sepital-coloured antique photographs of the day show hundreds of pearl boats setting sail from the island, powered to the oyster beds by their slanting la-move we had to. Divers were always prone to headaches or broken eardrums.

The diving began at 5.30 a.m. and lasted for two hours, with each dive limited to about I minute. A diver's life frequently depended on a less-skilled partner, even younger, who manned the two ropes that lifted the divers and his net bag filled with ovsters. Until sunset, no food was permitted the divers except for dates and water. At night, the divers slept on the decks, which were several inches deep in oyster

In the tradition of pearl diving, the cure for a punctured eardrum was pure machismo: holding a red hot nail to your temple. According to Ramadan, even by the 1950s pearl diving was

"The Gulf's pearl industry, which prospered for thousands of years, collapsed in the 1930s, the victim of the worldwide depression, the discovery of oil and Japan's perfection of the cultivated pearl."

Before oil, pearls were the primary source of income, either through diving, boat building or trading with foreign merchants. The pearl fleets, often more than 5.000 boats known as dhows. would set sail for the oyster beds in June and not return until October. The Gulf's culture revolved around the pearl season, from songs of the pearl fishermen to the gold and silver embroidery that women wore to welcome the pearl fleet home.

As Dannish, who is the son of a pearl diver, attested, life for many of those involved in pearling was extremely arduous. Divers had no more help than a bone clip for their mose and a rock to make them sink. Divers went to depths of 80 feet without benefit of wet suits, goggles or depressurisation.

"It was a harsh life." said Dannish. Ramadan Hassan Ramadan is one of the few surviving pearl divers in Bahrain. He worked as a diver until 1951, when he was only 15 years old and the pearl business was in its dying days. Many of his companions were only 12.

"It was very dangerous for us," Ramadan said. "The sharks used to circle the oyster beds, round and round, and if they didn't hardly more than a form of indentured servitude, with boat captains leading a diver's family money and the diver endlessly attempting to pay off the loan. A standard salary for four months' work was $30.

"I'm happy that pearl diving stopped," Ramadan said bitterly. "The shop's captain owned us. When the diving stopped, we became free." In 1932, the first oil well in the

Sununu: Israeli 'sovereignty' is key to Middle East peace

TEL AVIV (AP) — John Sununu, the Arab-American whose appointment as White House chief of staff aroused controversy among Jews. says the key to a Middle East peace is "to guarantee the integrity and strength of Israel as a sovereign

Sununu made the statement in an interview published Monday in the Jerusalem Post, adding that he expected President George Bush and Secretary of State James Baker to pursue peace in

"I think they're smart enough to know that it's in this country's (U.S.) interest to deal with the tough issues and no one can stay that it's not one of the great tough issues," he said.

When asked if he had strong feelings about the Middle East because of his Arab ancestry, he replied: "I have feelings in this sense: I think that... as time has moved forward that we have opportunities to move toward peace."

He told the Post it was "in Israel's interest, the United States' interest, frankly everyone's interest, to achieve peace and tranquility in the

"For example," he said, "for Israel's long-term economic situation, peace would be a tremendous asset. ... to stay under the constant tension that we seen is over the past few decades is not good. Noting that assuring Israel's "sovereignty" was the key to any peace settlement, Sununu said:

That has to be made clear." Sununu, who is of Lebanese descent, aroused unger among Israeli and American Jews when as governor of New Hampshire he refused to sign a petition calling for repeal of a United Nations resolution equating Zionism with racism. He was the only American governor who did not sign the document, saying at the time he believed was not his business as a governor to try to dictate foreign policy. In the interview with the Post, Sununu defended his record on Israel, noting he drafted the Middle East plank in the Republican platform, which is regarded as pro-Israeli. Sununu confirmed he had been a member of the National Association of Arab Americans, but said he was a third-generation American who visited Lebanon only once, in 1949.

The EEC governments also expressed satisfaction that the PNC had explicitly condemned "terrorism.

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said France, Italy, Spain and Greece had wanted the statement to include a reference to U.N. Resolution 181 of 1947. The resolution was the basis for the PNC declaration.

MIDDLE EAST NEWS IN BRIEF

Gouled reshuffles party leadership

DJIBOUTI (R) - President Hassan Gouled has shuffled the leadership of Djibouti's ruling party to take account of political changes over the last three years. Gouled said in a statement Sunday that three new members had been appointed to the 15-man politburo of the People's Rally for Progress (RPP) to replace former Transport Minister Aden Robleh Awaleh, who was expelled from the party and fled into exile in 1986, and two ministers who have since died. The new politburo members are Atteve Ismale Waiss, Mohamed Ali Mohammad and Moussa Bourale Robleh, none of whom hold ministerial office. Six members of the polithuro were assigned new posts in the reshuffle, but Prime Minister Barkat Gourat Hamadou remains first vice president of the RPP and Foreign Minister Moumin Bahdon Farah stays on as the party's secretary general.

Crash kills Israeli soldier in Lebanon

TEL AVIV (R) - An Israeli soldier was killed and four were injured when their armoured vehicle overturned in Israel's self-declared "security zone" in southern Lebanon Sunday, military sources said. An army spokesman confirmed the soldier's death but said he could give no details about the accident, which occurred north of Nagoura.

Al Azhar condemns 'Satanic Verses'

CAIRO (AP) - The Islamic World's most venerated institute, Al Azhar, Sunday joined other voices in condemning "Satanic Verses", a book that won Britain's Whitbread literary prize. The novel, by Salman Rushdie, has been banned as blaphemous in the writer's native India and in some Arab countries. Describing it as containing "lies and figments of the imagination passing as facts of Islam," the head of Al Azhar, Sheikh Gad Al Haq Al Gad Al Haq called on Islamic organisations in Britain to join in taking legal steps to prevent the book's circulation.

Turkey, Iraq sign extradition pact

ANKARA (R) - Turkey and Iraq initialled Monday a protocol on the extradition of criminals and other legislative and penal affairs, Turkish officials said.

'Hostage beaten after escape bid'

NEW YORK (R) - Alann Steen, one of nine U.S. hostages still held in Lebanon, tried to escape but was caught and beaten, Newsweek reported Sunday. The magazine said U.S. intelligence had learned of the escape bid from Mithileshwar Singh, an Indian citizen with U.S. resident status who was freed in Damascus last month. Singh told U.S. officials that Steen was quickly recognised in a Beirut suburh and handed back to his captors, who beat him up, knocking fillings from his teeth, the magazine said. It did not identify the U.S. officials or intelligence sources. Newsweek reported that Singh had said the hostages had hoped to be freed for the U.S. presidential elections or by inauguration day in

Tlas visits Lebanon

BEIRUT (R) — Syrian Defence Minister Major-General Mustafa Thas arrived in Beirut Monday to inspect Syrian military units in the Lebanese capital, security sources said. They said he landed at Beirut international airport in a private plane amid tight security measures. It was not known if he would meet Lebanese leaders.

3 European defence envoys visit UAE

ABU DHABI (AP) - Britain's defence Minister George Younger conferred Monday with his counterparts in the United Arab Emirates on a short visit before preceding to Saudi Arabia. The Emirates News Agency (WAM) said Younger was received by deputy supreme commander Sheikh Khalifa Ibn Zayed and Defence Minister Sheikh Mohammad Ibn Rashed. Younger's visit to the UAE coincided with the arrival of French air force Commander-General Achille Lerche, who like Younger arrived late Sunday. Lerche is heading a military delegation and will hold talks with UAE air force officials on issues of mutual interest. according to diplomatic sources in Abu Dhabi. Italian Minister of Defence Valerio Zanone will also arrive in the UAE Tuesday on a short visit to the country. Italian embassy sources said.

GCC to hold talks with editors

BAHRAIN (R) — Bahrain's information minister was quoted Monday as saying the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) had decided to hold coordination talks with the region's newspaper editors. "I have agreed with the GCC secretariat to call for a first meeting of media editors to discuss coordination on basic journalistic matters," Tariq Almoayyed told the Bahraini daily Akhbar Al Khaleej. "It is not enough that (GCC) information ministers agree on the charter of media owners...there should be an exchange of feeling between the press and information ministries on how to implement these pacts." he said. "We feel there is a possibility of achieving this (GCC pact) as a true desire to cooperate exists in the Gulf press," he added.

Crown Prince calls for integrated development based on credible national information system

By Caroline Faraj Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan Monday opened two specialised seminars, the first, a regional one entitled "progress in science and technology for development in West Asia region" and an international one entitled "Access to Higher Education."

The first seminar was organised by the Higher Council for Science and Technology (HCST) in cooperation with the U.N. Centre for Science and Technology for Development and the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), while the second was organised by the Association of Arab Universities and the University of Jordan, in cooperation with the International Association of Universities.

Prince Hassan delivered speeches at the opening sessions of both seminars reviewing Jordan's plans with regards to numerous issues and questions related to human resources management, and utilising scientific research and technology to benefit comprehensive and integrated social, economic, cultural and scientific development. "Jordan's higher educational institutions and centres, as well as organisations concerned with science and technology, shoulder no easy task in formulating new ideas and policies to govern the science process and develop human resources potentials to serve in various specialisations that can

He said this responsibility "acquires additional dimension in the case of the less developed nations which have now gone beyond the stage of laying human and material infrastructures, to a stage of planning and programming the proper use of of manpower and material resources, and embarked on the process of

Sound planning of development and science and technology policies require integrated development based on a credible national information system covering all sectors, Prince Hassan pointed out.

This is required so that planners and decision makers can rely on real and objective data while dealing with the demands and circumstances free of miscalculations and assessments.

AMMAN (USIA) — Shafiq Zawaideh, the Minister of Public Works and Housing, and Bassam Atari, the Deputy General of the Jordan Housing Bank, partici-pated in a week-long conference on housing policy held in Washington, D.C. from Nov. 6 to Nov. 9.

Ministers and high level offi-cials with responsibility for finance, housing, urban development and similar concerns in thirty four countries attended. The conference was sponsored by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID).

At present over half the gross national product (GNP) in most countries is generated in urban areas, and the conference planners predict that share will increase in the future. They conclude, therefore, that most new population and economic growth will occur in cities and towns.

Most countries are facing more austere economic environments which makes it difficult or impossible for central government to pay for all the urban development that will be needed.

Conference participants discussed the roles that local government and the private sector may play in creating healthy and rapidly growing urban economies to provide housing and jobs. Mr. Atari led the discussion for a case study on Shelter Policy: Meeting the Challenge and Expanding the Private Sector Role.

DAMASCUS (Petra, J.T.) — Jordan and Syria Monday opened talks on the prospect of linking their national grids and cooperation in energy-related fields.

The talks, conducted by teams

Seminar on Greater Amman development opens

Urban growth put heavy burden on Amman — Adasani

AMMAN (Petra, J.T.) — Many Arab cities have by now overcome basic problems related to municipal services but there are many others which still lack proper health, electricity, water and telephone services and suffer from unorganised building, Arab Cities Organisation (ACO) Secretary General Abdul Aziz Al Adasani said Monday.

Amman, like other Arab cities, had faced from a huge population growth and had to face numerous difficulties to improve its services to residents, Adasani said in a speech at the opening of a threeday meeting to discuss Greater Amman Municipality's endeavours to develop the capital and its surrounding areas from now until the year 2005.

The Ministry of Planning, the Greater Amman Municipality, . the University of Jordan and the ACO have all joined forces in organising the seminar which will discuss 30 working papers prepared by specialists in city organisation including university professors here and abroad.

The seminar is of significant importance since it will tackle various social and economic dedevelopment schemes which affect city planning and contribute to the country's progress as a whole, Adasani said.

All Arab cities are alike in terms of their background and their urban problems and they all with problems like the population explosium, vast construction growth, lack of sufficient municipal services and others, Adasani He said Amman's population in 1935 was estimated at 5,000 and in 1957 this figure jumped to 40,000 to become more than a million at present. This vast growth, he noted, had placed heavy burdens on the municipal authorities over the past years. What is needed, he said, are sound and well planned studies that can help municipalities cope with the growth and additional requirements and also curb people's emigration to the cities.

The session was opened by a al development, pointing to the 40s that led to the migration of Palestinians to the East Bank following their forced eviction from their homeland, and said that Amman's growth has been 'continuing despite the municipality's limited resources.

Aramouti also outlined in his Municipality's plans for expanfacing limited revenues that can pality.

presented municipal authorities obstruct the implementation of ambitious plans and limit dedevelopment.

A speech was read out at the opening session by a delegate representing the executive director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements, reviewing the vast development of Third World cities over the past three decades especially in the Middle East and North Africa.

The high birth rates in developing nations prompted the migration of people from rural to urban cities thus placing additional burdens on planners and municipal authorities, he said.

The working papers deal with other countries experiments in city planning and transport, urban development, the involvespeech from Deputy Greater ment of different organisations Amman Mayor Ismail Aramouti, and government departments in who reviewed Amman's historic- resolving housing, population and municipal issues in cities and occupation of Palestine in the late the the use of land for housing purposes within urban regions. # Oh no, not another 'missed opportunity'

ONE OF the favourite phrases of American officials in successive administrations in the past decade has been "missed opportunities" for peace in the Middle East — a very pointed and unambiguous reference to the PLO's "failure to come through." Well, this time the PLO has come through and accepted U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 and renounced "terrorism." Now it is up to Washington and American strategists to abandon procrastinations and make good their promises and pledges of sincerity to see peace prevailing in the Middle East. This is the message contained in remarks made by His Majesty King Hussein to U.S. television Saturday.

As His Majesty recalled in the interview, the PLO's acceptance of Resolutions 242 and 338 and renunciation of terrorism were the two main conditions that the U.S. had set, as far back as April 1985, for PLO participation in an international peace conference on the Middle East. Strangely enough, the PLO's compliance with the two conditions could only draw a lukewarm response from Washington, which, for all theoretical purposes, is anxious to find a just and lasting settlement of the Palestinian problem. If anything, one would expect the 12-month-old uprising in the occupied territories to have added a sense of urgency for a peaceful settlement. But not so any more for Washington, it

What happened, may we ask? Why do we get the feeling that the PLO gesture has suddenly poured cold water on American enthusiasm for peace in the Middle East? Or is it that the PLO's definite turn to a moderate course for peace through international legitimacy has thrown an unexpected spanner in the American works? We hope that this is not the case and the American response to the PLO move was not very encouraging only because of the transitional phase between Reagan and Bush in the White House. At the same time, we also look to a Bush administration which nherits the eight-year experience of the Reagan White House in dealing with Israel, and which twists arms where necessary. That is the only alternative to continued violence and bloodshed in the Middle East.

Above all, let us hope this will also not be another "missed

ARABIC PRESS EDITORIALS

Al Ra'i newspaper Monday commented on His Majesty King Hussein's statements on CBS network predicting that the Middle East crisis will be one of the priorities for the coming U.S. administration. This optimism, the King said, can materialise if Washington is convinced that the PLO has now moved closer to America's position, the paper said. It said that the U.S. had earlier demanded that the PLO should recognise U.N. Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338 as a pre-requisite for its involvement in peace negotiations and the PLO has now given its recognition of the resolutions in accordance to Washington's standards and is now eligible as a party in the peace making process. Jordan, it added, has not only created the atmosphere for such a step that can lead to a real and lasting peace, but has also placed the U.S. and Israel face to face with their responsibilities. Through severing ties with the West Bank, Jordan, the paper pointed out, has caused the PLO to act, and it remains to be seen whether the U.S. and Israel can respond favourably to this constructive step.

A columnist in Al Ra'i Arabic daily comments on Egypt's recognition of the independent Palestinian state which came despite the restrictions imposed on Cairo through the Camp David Accords. Mahmoud Al Rimawi says that Cairo's recognition bears a significant meaning since it is still bound with Tel Aviv through the 1978 deal which led Egypt to have a separate solution for its problem with the Jewish state. Even before the recognition. Egypt under Mubarak took the significant step of accepting the PLO as sole and legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and continued to support its endeavours world-wide, the writer points out. He says the Camp David agreements had provided for autonomy rule for the Palestinians and no more, but the PLO's step of proclaiming independence is a greater step which has been welcomed by the Arab World and recognised by Egypt. Furthermore. Rimawi says. Egypt in more than one occasion had announced that the Camp David agreements have achieved their purpose but are no more suitable as a framework for a comprehensive peace.

Al Dustour daily described King Hussein's statements to the CBS television network as a defence of the PLO's credibility and its readiness to respond favourably to the requirements of peace. The King gave plain answers to the questioner about Jordan's stand with regard to U.N. Security Council resolutions and said that the PLO has now recognised these resolutions as demanded by the United States and has renounced all forms of terrorism. With its recent decisions the PLO has now responded to all the demands, a step which ought to end Israel's intransigence and obduracy, the paper noted. In his statement on television, the paper added, the King addressed the American public opinion with reason and urged the U.S. administration not to lose more time in finding a just and durable settlement for the Arab-Israeli Sawt Al Shaab daily also commented on the same topic and said that the King proved once again that he is spearheading efforts towards establishing peace in the Middle East. King Hussein was the first Arab leader to extend support for the Palestinian stand and has used his power and influence at high levels and on all occasions to promote the Palestinian cause, the paper said. The King's statement to CBS network can thus be classified as another move by the monarch following the severance of ties with the West Bank to enhance the stand of the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

Benazir's legacy

By Tariq Ali

FOR 11 YEARS the militarybureaucratic regime in Islamabad had insisted that "Bhuttoism" was dead: that the People's Party (PPP) was a corpse; that new men like Mohammad Khan Junejo and Fakhr Imam were the wave of the future: that a young woman could never win the respect, leave alone the votes, of God-fearing Muslims; that the population had happily transcended the past; that General Zia was a sober and dignified statesman who had brought stability back to the country. This view was given a great deal of credence Washington and London. Tame journalists in the West glibly repeated official propaganda. Now the Pakistani electorate has firmly rejected the legacy of Zia. Eight federal cabinet ministers lost their seats.

Pakistan's first general election since 1977 took place because there were no real options available after Zia's sudden demise last August. A new military coup would have been totally counterproductive. Nonetheless, Zia's political heirs conceived the election as an obstacle race. Benazir Bhutto was denied access to the state-controlled media. On Nov. 17 Pakistan Times carried the headline: III Sweeps Polls (the Islamic Democratic Alliance was the Punjab). A very large proportion of Benazir's supporters were effectively disenfranchised by a mainly affected women and the

In a country starved of democracy there is usually a very high turnout when an election takes place. In 1970 over 90 per cent of the electorate actually voted. In 1977 the figure was over 80 per cent. On Nov. 17 under 40 per cent went to the polls. This was largely because they did not possess identity cards. Despite the choose the candidates. because of the low turnout and some carefully organised behindthe-scenes intimidation of PPP voters. Zia's political protege. Nawaz Charif, was contesting the election from four seats. He lost two of these and only won in Lahore because of the liberal use of greenbacks and identity cards. Sharif's hostility to the PPP dates back to the Seventies. He was the proprietor of a large steel foundry. His workers went on strike. He used goons to try and end the strike. The workers appealed to the then prime minister of the country. Bhutto, who nationalised the factory. During Zia's rule it was privatised once again and Sharif became eternally grateful. Pakistani politics can often be as simple and straightforward as that.

The PPP would have won the Punjabi city of Jhelum. This is a traditional heartland of the army in the sense that many of the rank-and-file soldiers hail from this area. So everything points to Benazir re-entering Prime Minister's House in Rawalpindi, which was surrounded by army tanks when her father was toppled and imprisoned by the military in 1977. Minister, Benazir Bhutto will confront a set of unenviable problems. Externally the Afghan situation remains unresolved. During the election campaign the Islamic fundamentalists were promising that the green crescent would soon fly over Kabul and Delhi. Benazir has pledged that she will implement the Geneva Accords. This means aiding a political settlement which permits the total withdrawal of Soviet troops from the region. Given the involvement of Inter-Services Intelligence with the most recalcitrant and fundamentalist of the warring Afghan factions, she will need Washington's backing if this is going to be accomplished.

On the home front the situation is just as bad. There has been a total collapse of any form of welfare provision for the poor and needy. Reaganomics has left the country totally bankrupt. An elected government will simply have to find the money needed to build schools and hospitals and provide food subsidies for the poverty-stricken. The problem here is the grotesquely inflated military budget. Will the army high command permit her to tamper with their perks and pri-vileges? The PPP has pledged a drastic land reform in its manifesto. If implemented this would bring great joy to the peasants throughout the country. It would bring Benazir enormous popularity among the common soldierly which is overwhelmingly rural in origin. But will some of the powerful landlords who sit happily inside her party agree to such

Youth sweeps away political heavyweights in Pakistan polls

By Oliver Wates

ISLAMABAD — Pakistan's federal election was a triumph of youth over age.

The leaders of the three largest parties in the new national assembly, which was elected Wednesday, are all under 40.

Benazir Bhutto, whose Pakistan People's Party (PPP) took 92 seats, is 35. The Islamic Democratic Alliance (IDA), which won 55, will be led by Punjab province Chief Minister Nawaz Sharif, a

Voters swept away a phalanx of veteran political heavyweights. They included six federal ministers and, most prominent, Mohammad Khan Juneto, prime minister from 1985 till last May.

Whoever succeeds in putting together a majority coalition. there is a new look to Pakistani nolitics. "It could be a very healthy thing for Pakistan, to have turn and turn about," one Western diplomat commented. Under the constitution, acting-President Ghulam Ishaq Khan must ask the person he considers most able to win a vote of confidence in the assembly to form a government. He has yet to indicate publicly whom he will choose.

Ishaq Khan, chairman of the senate, the upper house of parhament, is himself a great survivor in Pakistani politics

Now 73, he has never been out of a government job in almost half a century, serving as senior bureaucrat and minister under both Bhutto's father. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, and the man who overthrew him in 1977, General Mohammad Zia Ul Haq.

Paving the way to liberty

Hail sons and daughters of dear Palestine, Hail hundreds of blessed martyrs in your shrines Hail mothers of the children, who still live the sacrifice Declaring proudly that such honour does suffice:

Although dear children, you were bred and born In a land occupied, ravished and torn, The love of freedom and of liberty, Was suckled from your mothers' breasts in infancy And you were weared upon the hope of victory. And on the feats of courage and of bravery,

Unlike all other girls and boys. You have no happy childhood, have no joys. Your bedtime story is a nightmare full of fear, And your days are crowded with anguish and with tears Instead of marching in a school parade. You march defiant, demonstrating, unafraid, And though your only arms are sticks and stones They heat you with no mercy, and then break your bones Despite this you resist and make a stand. Only to be struck down and maimed by brutal hands

Although they club your limbs, your backs they cannot bend For faith in your cause gives you strength to march until the end

Though young in years, you tower oh so tall, Whilst your oppressors with their arms become so small

Young and unarmed, you are as strong As only Right can be against the Wrong. Your only weapons are your faith sublime And your belief so firm in God Divine. The church-bells peal their blessings to you for the world to beer Whilst in the mosques are held prayers, devout, sincere And all the Arabs, whatever their creed stand hand in hand, Determined to resist oppression, and retrieve their sacred land.

The whole wide world could scarcely believe What these young children did achieve. It is an epic that can have no par In ancient history or in modern war.

With stones these children pave the path to liberty In spite of being subjected to brutality. And soon the day shall come when everyone can see That right's of nations shall o'er come all tyranny And that these young "saints" sacrifice was not in vain For Palestine shall, with God's Will, freedom regain.

American life, Martin Luther King was stabbed, bombed, shot at, jailed, beaten and finally killed for his radical vision of Christian love and social justice. He had taken over the leadership of the Montgomery bus boycott in 1956 at the age of 26, won the Nobel Peace Prize at 35, and was murdered at 37. In that brief span, as David Garrow argues in his Pulitzer Prize winning account of King and the Southern Christian Leadership Council (SCLC), of which King was the figure-head, he put the theology of the cross back into the American consciousness.

The cross epitomises the paradox of Christian faith: God revealed not in strength but in vulnerability. King's championing of non-violence allowed the most impoverished, the most vulnerable, the most oppressed of America's underclasses to make a spectacle of their righteousness. 'In a crisis we need a sense of drama," he said, understanding and exploiting his power as a symbol to mould conscisus. The blacks represented only 10 per cent of the American population: and he knew that if blacks were going to demand change, their power had to come from "a coali-

SCLC had shifted their struggle from political to economic justice (open housing in Chicago, the Poor People's Campaign) and world peace (ending the Vietnam War). "The government has got to give me some victories," said King, in 1966, frustrated at LBJ's "passive enforcement" of civil rights legislation, "if I'm going to keep people non-violent." He couldn't. Black Power, which King called "a slogan without a programme;" was dividing black and white America. The SCLC was still chanting "Freedom Now" on their marches; but the SNCC was singing a new tune: "Too much love/Too much love/ Nothing kills a nigger/Like too much love."

King himself went as far as espousing "civil disobedience" in the North where the problems were different and more difficult to expose. "Pressureless persuasion does not move the power structure," he said. When some of his marchers began to riot in the 1968 Memphis march to promote the Poor People's Campaign, he suffered a disastrous blow to his public image which effectively put the kaibosh on the ill-organised Poor People's Cam-

LIMA (R) - Burdened by soaring inflation and shortages of basic commodities. Peru will shortly unveil new economic measures to stimulate exports and cut government subsidies.

President Alan Garcia said at the weekend that the new antiinflation plan would be announced in the next few days." Economists and local newspapers have predicted the measures would devalue the Peruvian currency, the inti, against the dollar for exports to 415, from the current rate of 250.

Trade unions representing sugar workers, judicial employees and miners have struck to press wage demands to compensate them for an inflation rate that reached 1,100 per cent in the year to October. Some economists predict inflation could reach 2,000 per cent in the year to December.

Garcia, whose popularity has plummeted as the economy has declined, said the anti-inflationary measures would boost incentives for exporters by devaluing the inti.

"Now there is no will to export, to sell abroad, and bring dollars to Peru because the price paid for these dollars is very little." Gar-crisis, his government is also fighting the Maoist "Sendero Luminoso" (Shining Path) guerrillas who draw support from poverty-stricken rural areas. Garcia said he had rejected his cconomic advisers' suggestion that he enact a sweeping reduction of subsidies, Fearing such measures would place too great a burden on impoverished Peruvian families. He said, however, that some subsidies for imported foods and other goods would be cut.

"Sixty per cent of the population does not have a job, and so there is only one route and that is to withdraw subsidies progressively," he said.

Government officials said the month-long miners' strike has meant that the country does not have enough foreign exchange to import such hasic commodities as wheat and rice to feed children. Mining is Peru's biggest foreign exchange earner.

Navratilova tops bonus pool earnings

NEW YORK (R) - Martina Navratilova carned a top bonus pool check of $450,000 awarded by the women's tennis tour Sunday for singles and doubles incentives, while Steffi Graf was ineligible for the second consecutive year. Graf, number one in the world, finished first in the series points standings and would have earned $400,000 in bonuses, but the Grand Slam winner played in just eight tournament, three less than the minimum required to qualify. Graf's father Peter commented earlier in the season that he was more worried about his daughter's mental freshness than the bonus check. Gabriela Sabatini, who beat Pam Shriver 7-5, 6-2, 6-2 to win the season finale, finished second in the bonus standings with $265,000. Chris Evert was third with MADRID (R) - England international Gary Lineker scored his first goal of the season Sunday to help Barcelona defeat Real Oviedo 2-1 and stay firmly in contention for the Spanish league championship. The away victory keeps Barcelona two points behind reigning champions Real Madrid, who struggled to beat Logrones 1-0 away Saturday.

Alen reduces Kankkunen's lead

ENGLAND (AP) — Finland's Markku Alen, searching for his first win in the Lombard RAC rally after 15 years as a top driver, clipped three seconds off defending champion and compatriot Juha Kankkunen's overnight lead after Monday's ninth stage. The top four positions remain unchanged with Kankkunen, the former double world champion, leading Alen by 24 seconds despite recording only the fourth fastest stage time. Ninth stage winner Bjorn Waldegegard, the 1977 Lombard winner from Sweden, consolidated his overnight third place, ahead of fellow Swede

Sabatini wins biggest title of her career NEW YORK (R)

Gabriela Sabatini won the biggest title of her career by beating Pam Shriver 7-5, 6-2, 6-2 Sunday in the final of the $1 million Women's Tennis Championships that signal the end of the 1988 tour.

The fourth-seeded Sabatini, who entered the match with a 3-5 record against Shriver, called it her biggest win ever.

"It was the best week I ever had in my life," said the fourthseeded Argentine, who won $125,000. "I have to say that today is the best tennis I ever played.

Sabatini's straight-set triumph snapped an impressive upset streak by Shriver. The fifth-seeded American ended the 46match win streak of world number one Steffi Graf in the semifinals after beating third seed Chris Evert in the quarter-finals.

In the hard-fought opening set, Sabatini and Shriver exchanged service breaks in the third and fourth games, and Sabatini broke again for a 4-3 lead on a Shriver 10th game when she stabbed a forehand volley into the open court and finally broke Sabatini on her fifth break point. But Shriver appeared drained, dropping her serve in the 11th game and letting Sabatini take the net Shriver saved a set point in the twice in the 12th game to win the games in the second set.

Shriver struggled with her serve, her biggest weapon, for the rest of the match. She doublefaulted on break point in the first game of the second set and was broken in three of four service

KARACHI (Agencies) — Pakistani opposition leader Benazir Bhutto emerged smiling Monday from three hours of talks on forming a coalition government with a Karachi-based ethnic party and said they had been useful.

"I am satisfied with the talks," the 35-year-old leader of the Pakistan People's Party (PPP) told reporters.

She said the PPP had many views in common with the Mohajir National Movement and the two parties were setting up a joint committee to discuss the rest.

But Mohajir leader Altaf Hussain stressed there had been no agreement on a pact. "Our options are wide open. We have not finalised agreement with any party," he said.

The pro-government Islamic Democratic Alliance (IDA) has also sought to woo the Mohajirs, Muslims who migrated to Pakistan when British India was partitioned on independence in 1947. Alliance leader Nawaz Sharif met Hussain last Friday.

Kosovo remains calm

PRISTINA. Yugoslavia (AP) The southern province of Kosovo remained calm Monday as Serbian Communist Party leader Slobodan Milosevic appeared to reject demands for reinstatement of two ethnic Albanian who resigned last week.

The threat of a crackdown on demonstrations, along with appeals throughout Kosovo by party activists and teachers for workers to remain on the job and students to stay in school, kept streets quiet.

The Albanian language communist daily Rilindja also pub-lished an appeal to all citizens not to "go on the road of no return" by renewing demonstrations.

Street demonstrations in Pris-tina erupted when ethnic Albanian leaders Azem Vlasi and Kacusa Jasaric were forced to resign under pressure from Serbia's leaders The demonstrations began last Thursday, and swelled into the tens of thousands Friday and Saturday. There also was a tiny four-hour march around Pristina by students Sunday. The only report Monday of street parades by Kosovo's ethnic Albanian majority came from Orahovac, a town 50 kilometres southwest of Pristina, where the state news agency Tanjug said about 500 school students and a few workers paraded down the main street. Milosevic has been pushing for the resignations of leaders he blames for ethnic tensions in Kosovo and for constitutional changes that would give Serbia more control over its restive pro-

Milosevic wants to restore Serbian control over the judiciary, schools and policing of the pro-vince to stop alleged harassment of the Slav minority.

These changes are "a precondition for Serbian unity," he said Monday.

Kosovo was granted broad autonomy under the 1974 constitution, but administratively it remains part of Serbia. Milosevic, addressing Serbian communists in Belgrade in a keynote address at the start of a three-day conference Monday, appeared to reject demands that Hwan delayed apologising to the Vlasi and Jasaric be reinstated.

The provincial party leadership has promised to review their cases at a meeting later this week.

Milosevic made no direct reference to the weekend protests. But he said ethnic Albanian youths, who made up the majority of the protesters, are "victims of indoctrination."

The ideologues of counterrevolution should be held responsible and not those who are just their arm," he added. "We should let these people out of jail and jail those who are really responsible for the genocide and terror.

About 500 ethnic Albanians are in jail on charges of fomenting counterrevolution with alleged nationalism.

Canada party boldiv makes no prediction

TORONTO (R) - Canada's

Rhinoceros Party boldly pre-dicted it would either win or lose the country's general election Monday. "We've either formed the government or the opposition — we're not sure," a regional caucus chairman, Barry Heidt, said at the party's traditional pre-election celebratory bash. "We won 75 seats, even though we had only 74 candidates," said Heidt, who did predict his own victory in Toronto's Davenport voting district. Chief party agent Dale Alkerton told the faithful assembled at a downtown nightclub Saturday the Rhinos were "standing on a landing in the stairwell of history." The party platform includes charging the government budget deficit on an American Express credit card and turning acid rain into paint thinner. The Rhinos oppose the government's free trade pact with the United States, saying they want a deal that includes the return of ice hockey superstar Wayne Gretzky, who was traded to a U.S. team this year.

PARIS (R) — The government's determination to protect French art treasures sent prices soaring at an auction of surrealist pictures and sculptures Sunday. The state buying spree also pushed up bids from private buyers rushing in for their share of the auction. "The fact that the government representative showed so much interest spurred private buyers on," auctioneer Guy Loudmer said after the sale fetched 45.6 million francs ($7.6 million). The state bought back five of the most sought-after of 26 works collected by surrealist poet Tristan Tzara to be displayed in state-owned museums, exercising its right to keep what it terms France's national heritage in the country. The other buyers seemed to think that what was good enough for French state museums was good enough for their collections," Loudmer added.

Japan, U.S. differ on trust

TOKYO (AP) - For the 10th straight year. Japanese named the United States as their most trustworthy ally, but a simultaneous survey on the other side of the Pacific found Japan fell to 11th place among nations Americans trust. The annual poll, conducted in September and published Monday in the Yomiuri Shimbun, Japan's largest-circulation newspaper, asked people to choose the most trustworthy from a list of 30 countries. According to Yomiuri's Gallup Poll, 56 per cent of Japanese respondents, up 4 points from last year, said they considered the United States the most trustworthy country. The survey of 2,212 Japanese adults, picked randomly across the country, listed Britain as the second most trustworthy country. followed by Australia, China and Switzerland. In the United States. Japan's trustworthiness fell from ninth place last year to 11th in a survey of 1,030 Americans, aged 18 or older who were picked at random in 50 states and the district of Columbia, the daily said. Americans picked Canada as the most trustworthy country with 76 per cent, followed by Britain with 51.7 per cent. Australia 50.3 per cent, Switzerland 43.5 per cent and Sweden 35.4

WASHINGTON (R) - As the United States prepares for the public debut of its supersecret Stealth bomber Tuesday, scientists are criticising the project and comparing the cost to that of a solid gold plane.

The B-2, made of composite materials to foil Soviet radar, will be unveiled at the Northdrop plant in Palmdale, California.

But two groups of scientists say each plane could cost $850 million, despite previous estimates of about half that.

'We figured that if it was built out of solid gold, it would cost $950 million," physicist Michael Brower said. "Not gold plated,

Theories thrive but the question remains: Who killed Kennedy?

By Sid Moody The Associated Press

NEW YORK - The body of John F. Kennedy has been in its tomb 25 years. However, the identity of his slayer has still not been put to rest.

Conjuring up "who killed Kennedy?" theories has been a cult industry. Several hundred books have been written about the assassination. Conspiracy authors have been the darlings of talk shows and tabloids.

Scenarios have involved the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). KGB. Fidel Castro. Lyndon Johnson, Jack Ruby. the mafia and others.

The public has had difficulty accepting the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald, unaided, assassinated Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963. in Dallas. Conspiracy finds a believing audience.

Conspiracy theorists dismiss the Warren Commission's finding. Yet, by and large, they base their own theories on the very same 26-volume Warren report and its thousands of witness transcripts and affidavits and Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI) reports.

a visit by the queen would give tacit approval to were civilians, the majority peasants.

Mark Lane may be the bestknown critic of the commission. In his book "Rush to Judgment." Lane at one point tries to undermine the testimony of Harold Norman. Norman was an order-filler at the Texas School Book Depository, as was Oswald. The commission concluded that Oswald fired three shots at the president's motorcade from the sixth floor of the depository. Norman was one floor down watching the motorcade with two co-workers. "Although the three men withdrew from their position at the windows into the quiet of the deserted fifth floor, they were unable to detect any sound of movement above,

Lane writes.
A favourite sniper's nest among conspiracy theorists is the "grassy knoll" area. The motorcade was approaching it when Kennedy was shot. If there were another rifleman there as well as Oswald to the rear in the depository, the plot must thicken.

Lane several times cites the testimony of S.M. Holland who was standing near the grassy knoll and saw a puff of smoke come from the trees. Lane does not quote Holland's further testimony: "...and I heard three more shots after the first shot, but that was the only puff of smoke I saw."

Lane also cites Clemon E. Johnson, who told FBI agents that he had observed "white smoke" around the knoll.

Actually, four of them did. One said she couldn't determine the source. Two thought the shots came possibly from the depository area. One said they came from one of two buildings at "the corner." One of those buildings was the depository.

A pattern of selective quotation or even non-quotation recurs repeatedly in conspiracy writings. There is also innuendo.

The Warren Commission conducted one of the most extensive investigations in the nation's history. Its conclusions included these findings:

Oswald's rifle was found on the sixth floor of the depository. A builet and two fragments fired at the president's limousing were fired from that gun "to the exclusion of all other weapons." Oswald carned a long package into the depository that fatal morning.

John Kennedy campaigning in 1960

Hand prints of Oswald were found on the rifle and objects in the vicinity of the sixth-floor window where a man with a rifle was seen just before the shooting. Oswald shot and killed a Dallas policeman shortly after the assassination.

A disturbed malcontent whose life had been punctuated by violent outbursts - he once stabbed his half brother - Oswald had defected to the Soviet Union. After his return he fired a shot at Major-General Edwin Walker, a right-wing figure in Dallas.

This evidence never appeared in a courtroom. Oswald, of course, was slain two days after the assassination by Jack Ruby. Thus the world was denied the certitude, or the catharsis, of a trial,

Various theories have claimed that Oswald and Ruby were homosexual lovers and plotters or that Ruby was a hit man for a conspiracy.

per cent. Mappa Mundi sale creates furor

LONDON (R) - A decision by Britain's Hereford Cathedral to sell a unique medieval map to avoid bankruptcy provoked a storm of opposition Friday, with art experts saying the move could set a dangerous precedent. Sir Roy Strong, former director of London's National gallery and the Victoria and Albert Museum, is resigning from the Hereford Cathedral Appeal Committee in protest against the sale of the 13th century Mappa Mundi, the oldest surviving medieval map of the world. "I never thought I would see a dean touting the contents of his cathedral for sale the tastelessness and vulgarity of it is extreme." Strong said from his home near Hereford. Sotheby's auctioneers expect the map to fetch at least £2.5 million ($4.5 million) when it goes under the hammer next June. The dean and chapter of Hereford Cathedral decided to put the map up for sale to help to raise £7 million ($12.6 million) needed to clear a bank overdraft, carry out repairs and construction and fund a choral foundation.
